GRAPEVINE

• By GREER FAY CASHMAN

■ THE AMERICAN Association for Cancer Research, believed to be the most veteran cancer research organization in the world has named Miri Ziv, the director-general of the Israel Cancer Association, as the recipient of its Public Service Award for 2015. The announcement was made at the AACR's annual general meeting in Philadelphia on April 19. The AACR was founded in 1907, and today has a membership of 34,000 in 90 countries dealing with every aspect of cancer research and diagnosis. Ziv was recognized for her many years of devoted service to the cause and for promoting interest and activity in the battle against cancer and the effort to find a cure or better still a means of prevention. Ziv has introduced many projects into the work of the Israel Cancer Association and she has also been active in the global body.
